

Have a fire safety question? Ask the experts

You have a legal responsibility to protect residents and staff in your care home from the risk of fire, the law may often seem complicated and confusing. Meeting these mandatory requirements includes considering many elements of fire safety. From fire extinguishers suitable for the fire risk, fire signage, routine checking and testing of fire alarms, and inspection and servicing of fire extinguishers, there are many aspects involved in keeping your care home safe from the risk of fire.

Abbot Fire Group are exhibiting at the Care Show at the NEC on 3rd – 4th November. We're bringing along some experts to discuss different aspects of fire safety with you, so whatever questions or queries you may have, come along to stand D60 and have an informal chat.

Whether you're interested in finding out more about fire safety training, have questions on fire alarms and your responsibilities, are unsure about what a fire risk assessment covers, or need some direction with regards to your legal requirements for fire safety signage, we'd be delighted to see you. Just come along with your questions, and the team of specialists will be happy to talk to you.

Visit Abbot Fire Group on stand D60 at the Care Show, we look forward to seeing you. Alternatively, just call 01280 824111 with any fire safety questions you may have.
