Dry riser servicing

It is the responsibility of the landlord or owner of a premises to ensure that the dry riser in the building is serviced and fit for purpose. In the event of a fire, it is imperative for the fire brigade to access the vital water supply to fight and extinguish the fire, by connecting their hoses to the landing valves on each floor.

British Standards compliance

To comply with British Standards BS 9990 regulations dry risers should have a visual inspection every 6 months, and a full hydraulic test annually. It is important to undertake dry riser testing, as these inspections ensure all component parts are not damaged in anyway, and are therefore in full working order. If you're concerned about possible damage from conducting a wet test, Abbot Fire Group can undertake a dry test first to ascertain the integrity of the system. Obviously if this test highlights any problem areas, these can be rectified prior to undertaking the wet test.

Dry riser signage

British Standards BS 9990 also has strict recommendations for the signage requirements for dry risers. As you would expect, we can supply these important, industry recognised, signs for your dry riser too.

Regular testing, servicing and maintenance will ensure your dry riser complies with industry regulations.
